Dried flowers rock. They rock because ...

- timeless decor for the modern lifestyle
- can be re-gifted, re-used and re-arranged
- don't wither and die in hot conditions - ideal for use at weddings or commercial fit outs
- can withstand heat and be used outdoors for styling at events
- are an everlasting keepsake from special occasions
- kind to mother earth / eco floristry
- are unique and a modern visual

Preservation is also a form of drying, although it is much more sophisticated. The result is completely different. The preservation technique allows flowers to maintain a completely natural appearance and feel, as if they were freshly-cut flowers!

This is achieved as follows: Fresh flowers are cut when they are most beautiful and radiant. Instead of leaving them to dry, they undergo a re-hydration process by being placed in a mixture made from glycerin and other plant elements. This liquid gradually rises through the trunk until it completely substitutes the sap. After a few days, the process is complete and the plant is ready to be used.

The final result is a flexible flower with a completely natural appearance. The stabilization keeps working for months, or even years! With minimal care, we can enjoy our preserved flowers for a long time.
